Here is a book which you might come across , ???? H. N. _____ Victorians by William Erdland, and he tells us a lot of interesting stories about Darwin and Huxley, and brings out a very great deal of evidence that is quite interesting to know about. He is..... The book came out maybe six or eight years ago. It's very interesting, ~~I picked it up and found~~
You have to pick it up and find it _____ (14.00) and know something about it
I feel that the real evidence for evolution are weaker, They didn't have the word, but there is perhaps more insistence upon it and there are great many fine christian people who are making concessions that I don't think there are any basis for whatever .

Now here is an interesting book that I brought along and thought I might just quote from . This book is "Evolution and Christian Thought Today " and it is edited by (?) but actually I think Carl Henry has more (13:25)

The last chapter is "Theology and Evolution" Carl Henry has a series of quotations by evolutionists absolutely declaring how absolutely fixed and definite is the fact of evolution and there is no question about it. Then he asks the question "What is the evolution fact" and then he quotes from a lot of these same men tearing to pieces a lot of the arguments and he has a mine of valuable material in it . He gives it in such a general way that you don't really get the force of any of it unless you read it very, very carefully and you have a lot of extra material . This has far as mutations are concerned even Huxley brings out in his book that of the mutations which which apply, aver the great majority are like a person being born with one arm. They are simply changes that are impossible and die out and its only a very rare one that is good but, of course, Huxley (12) to make up some progress. But as it is agreed by all that the overwhelming fact of changes that occur spontaneously (11:50)
