

hard for the next two months. Even then it was a full semester before I thought I was getting the benefit from it. But the fact that these others were all nervous: Am I going to pass this? And I knew I wouldn't pass it anyway so what was the difference? I did better than they did. I think some fellows knowing half as much as Ward does, if he went into that group with real confidence would probably have made a first class impression.