

presbytery and assembly when that is to come up; I'd make the fight of my life to try to save Princeton Seminary. That's what I happen to recall that relates to those particular questions.

I hope you can get me a set of those === a list of those ordination questions that were asked of Nichol and Ward. Just the questions. I'd like to see the specific questions.

Neher: Quite a list!

AAM. Is that so?

Neher: That would be quite a list of whatever came to their minds at the moment, rather than things that they brought with them.

AAM: But to know things that did come to their minds would be useful in talking to people who are going to meet with a somewhat similar body. If they could have an idea and be well primed on those particular questions, I should think that would be very much worthwhile.

We were discussing about my years at Westminster and there were a lot of different things that happened during those years in different areas. One thing suggests another to my mind and reminds me of important or unimportant things.

There was a pamphlet put out in 1930 called Our Faculty. Did I mention that? I had it a couple of days ago. It had a statement about Dr. VanTil that fits with my impression of him 5 years later but I guess I never read it at the time. It was doubtless written by the students and it shows how things were developing there without my realizing it then at all.

When I was at Westminster one thing I was greatly interested in was working for my Ph.D. I was in a very advantageous position for that because the seminary was then down on Pine Street, in central Philadelphia and you could go out the door and within a comparatively
