

Of course it was bad when I was in college, and it's many times worse now.

I think a very interesting thing is Henry ^{Loose} ~~Loose~~ of Time Magazine who wanted his magazine to be a strong conservative force. He had to hire first class journalists and his journalists were practically all brain-washed ~~from~~ for liberalism. The result is that the net effect of his magazine, though not nearly as liberal as many others is in the liberal direction. It was and is much more so now.

That covers the main things on that. O yes, you ~~said~~ spoke about the conspiracy. There are people who talk about the Illuminati, a group of Jews who 1000 years ago and made the plan how they were going to gain control of the world. I have no doubt that there have been many little groups of people at many times who have laid plans as to how they were going to get control of the world, but I think it very unlikely that any of them ever got very far.

The Jews stand together to help one another. If there is a chance to advance a Jew rather than someone else, they are usually pretty good at that, but when it comes to actually working together and combining, they are pretty divided. They are very individualistic. And the idea that ~~they~~ there ever was any continuing group of Jews or any other group that was a continuing underhanded conspiracy that was successful, I think is purely imaginary. I think it's very unfortunate to waste time spreading ideas of that type.

I do think it is true that there are many people who have been conditioned by our present educational system which is in this country and in other countries, conditioned to hate the whole system that has made them prosperous. These people work together pretty much. I don't think it's a planned working together to any great extent. I think they are simply following out the belief they have been led into.

I think it is wasteful and harmful to waste time talking about the conspiracies. I have good friends who say when most anything is done which hurts our system, they say, That's the communists, the communists are doing it. Well, I think the communists are going everything they can to get control of our country. But I don't think that what they are able to do at present is 1/5th as important a factor as the attitude of the liberals who have been brainwashed in college.

Some of these people, of course, join the conspiracy and some of them adopt a position like spies. You get a man in high school who is thoroughly indoctrinated that we must do away with the capitalistic system and must get the Russians to have control over the world. A certain number of them ~~a~~ become so thoroughly devoted to it that there are those who lead them to hide their views from then on and join the CIA or something. They give every protestation of supporting the American system yet looking all the time for a chance to wreck it!
