

that we had very little time to get things in shape to start the year. But I think it was good for general relations. The man who ran the center -- he , Dr. McIntire and I met together shortly before they began their day camp. He was thrilled that we were going to push ahead and be ready to be there in the fall. He thought that was marvellous to move with such dispatch.

Of course when someone could make decisions like Dr. McIntire could and can always get the fund necessary to carry them through it's possible to make quick decisions and carry them through effectively. It's also possible to make wrong decisions and cause difficulty.

Maybe we ought to stop there today.
