

as part time or full time, and about half the time they would turn out to be good teachers and about half the time they would not. Over and over I've had people come to me and say, I think the Lord is calling me to teach. I always say, I believe that anyone with intelligence and hard work can do a job as a pastor. There are some that can't. But the pastoral ability, the ability to preach while not universal by any means, is not very uncommon.

But teaching ability is not rare, but it is somewhat more rare, and I don't know anyway to tell whether a man can teach ~~except~~ except to try it. I've gotten people to teach part time. I had one shortly before that and all the evaluations said wonderful chap, grand fellow but can't teach at all. We never had him back after that but I always felt that those particular courses he taught were a waste.

I just feel that some people take a month or more to get their stride. They may not seem promising at all. But they turn out excellent. Other people seem to going to be excellent and they don't work out.

So I always say when a fellow says, I think the Lord wants me to teach, I say, Don't go and spend 3 or 4 years getting a Ph.D. in order to teach and then perhaps find you can't teach. You've got your seminary training. Go and try to get a church somewhere, ~~if~~ if possible somewhere near a Bible school or Christian college. If you are there sometime within the next few years you'll get a chance to do a little teaching and see how you do.

Find out if you can teach before you spend a lot of years getting a training that will only be useful to you as a teacher. That year everyone we got turned out well. I don't think there was a single one of the whole group -- perhaps the poorest you might say was Killam. Killam just had his doctorate. It was McIntire's suggestion to get him. On his father's farm in Canada they had discovered oil so he was independently well-off. He taught apologetics and systematic theology. In apologetics I think he had a lot of good ideas, and the people were kind of -- well, they thought the course was alright. But in systematics they thought he was terrible.

They were very ~~xxx~~ very critical of him in systematics.

Neher~~e~~ Mr. Dunzweiler teaches systematics and apologetics now, so when did he come on teaching at that time.

I think for a few years he taught Hebrew. I know he got some Hebrew verb charts printed up. He was using them in class. Harding did not teach Hebrew for a number of years. It was only after a number of years that Harding started teaching Hebrew. Yes, I think Dunzweiler taught to quite an extent Hebrew. Taylor I think taught some Hebrew too. It's hard to remember some of those. I know that at first -- Oh, Killam taught systematics one semester. At the end of the semester he quit. When he quit he announced to the presbytery -- you see, I had had a lot of trouble with the faculty the year before when they were all in
