

Last Sunday morning on Robert Schuller's (sp?) program he had Moore as a guest. Unfortunately I came into the room shortly ~~was~~ after he had begun the conversation had begun, so I did not hear much of what was said, though I heard him remark a few words.

Another of the meetings I remember was related to hermeneutics, and at this meeting it seemed that some people the paper impressed me as<sup>a</sup> rather tenuous and philosophical approach. There were a number of people who felt very strongly about it. There were were a number of people who were extremely anxious to discuss this particular paper. One of them was son of Dr. Payne who was evidently a missionary, I'm not sure whether it was in the Philippines or in Japan. He had written quite a discussion of it that he wished ~~xxxxx~~ read, and his father ~~x~~ read it. There was a long line of ~~xxx~~ people wanting to discuss. The thing that stands out most clearly (it in mind; ~~it~~ seems to me it was from that meeting although I might be wrong) ~~xxx the thing that stands out most clearly in my mind is~~ was Dr. Geisler discussing something Francis Schaeffer had written related to Thomas Aquinas. He said, "What does Schaeffer know ~~about~~ about Thomas Aquinas?" He said, "I have been reading Aquinas half my life." I was not impressed with his attitude although I have no recollection of really what was involved in this discussion, and I could not see why he, one who was quite well known as a speaker and writer in evangelical circles, should be so interested in Thomas Aquinas. I looked Geisler up later and found that he had taken his college in a small Christian college, I believe it was Michigan Christian College, or something like that; I believe taken seminary work in a similar institution. He became professor of systematic theology, I believe, in Trinity, and then, within very recent year, went from there to be professor of systematic theology in Dallas. Geisler is a very active member of the council and has represented it in speaking all over the country, and has written a number of books and pamphlets that the ICBI has distributed. There is much that I have seen and heard that seems very good about him. Unfortunately, when I met him, came in touch with him personally, as I was arriving at a meeting of the Advisory ~~Committee~~ Committee ~~XXX~~ in Chicago, I did not recognize him. He looked different to me close
