

they were all waiting for him. One man filled with the spirit of God, on fire to declare what Christ had done for him, deterred by no obstacles from preaching the Word of Truth in the district to which God had called him was used to make this great change. The hardest fields are never hopeless. There is no limit to the extent to which God may use a truly consecrated witness.

Thus in the sequel to the story of the healing of this man, we find much that can be of real help for us to-day. He was ready to leave all to follow Christ. When the field of service to which Christ assigned him and far less romantic and attractive than that which he ^{himself preferred} had chosen, he did not let his disappointment overcome him. He became a true witness in his own home and in his own city, ~~He gave a true story there,~~ and he witnessed so effectively that only eternity will tell the full extent of the results of his testimony.