

absolute God and absolute man at the same time and one person. Well, we don't know. But He is. The Scripture clearly teaches both and in the early days the Christian church had (11) to make it plain how it could be.

Because he had a mind, he had a mind and a body that was human, He had a spirit that was alive. And the Council at Constantinople said, No lefts or rights and then they said, the Divine and the human are entirely separate and it is just an artificial joint. And the Council of Ephesus said No. And then they said the trio, the divine nature and the human nature are so mixed that He has a new nature that is a mixture, partly divine and partly human and the Council of Calvin said No lefts or rights. He is wholly God and wholly man and the mixtures are not separate and they are not mixed. But he is one person. For the Bible teaches us that and it is perfectly logical and perfectly reasonable but we don't ~~think~~ necessarily have the mind to understand the reason (12) And that is true in any scientific You get to the point where your reasoning is up and then it breaks down because you need a few more facts and then you get the facts and you find it quite different and when you get those facts, then you can proceed to reason in that direction until you get a few more facts and find find it (12 $\frac{1}{4}$ ) . And of course when you get into Eternal things it is all the more so. And God wants us to use our reasoning But whatever we don't have, God has said in His Word he wants us to say, 'It looks this way to me. Not to say, "This is true." (End of Record 4)

(Begin Record 5) Time to get the clue and if the usual answer to help us but there is also a good chance to be sitting up a smoke screen to try to excuse himself for having it the way he wants to go. And let him face that question. Does he really want the truth, even if it means giving up Does he really want it? And if he faces that question then he will know that he wasn't one or he really wants to live in sin or he will perhaps find evidence that he is the one whom God has elected to Eternal life the one who will be. I think it is very helpful to give evidence to the unbeliever to remove the obstacle that he is putting up a