over a hot fire and fused them together in order to make the glass windows. The whole thing represents the plan of an intelligent mind." I said, "How right you are! We cannot believe that the cabin assumed its present shape through accident. An intelligent mind made the plan and carried it out. Yet the universe is a trillion times more complex than any log cabin. Surely it took a transcendent mind and purpose to bring this cosmos into existence and to cause it to work according to the definite principles that we observe at so many thousands of points.

Surely it is obvious that this marvelous universe was formed according to definite intelligent plan, that a great mind conceived it all and that an omnipotent Creator established its principles and laws, and arranged the forces that control it! Since this is so, what else could possibly be as important as recognizing the great Creator and doing our best to bring our lives into accordance with His plan.

Ordinary common sense should make us know that there is a great God who created all things and controls them. But men turn their eyes away from God and forget Him. In fact, I must say that every person here at times in his life has turned his eyes away from God, even today there are many points at which you and I have forgotten to put God first, and have formed our plans or ideas without taking Him into account.

Even the simplest observation of the wonders of this universe or of the marvelous construction of the human body should be sufficient to convince anyone that a great mind established and controls it all. Nature gives us abundant evidence of the power and intelligence of this great Planner. But nature tells us nothing about His character and purposes.
