

No wonder that Paul, in the beginning of Romans 11, after he asked the question, "Hath God cast away his people?" broke out into the strong exclamation, "God forbid." God's promises can never be destroyed. Praise God for the way He has used the seed of Abraham through the years.

In every generation there have been Jews who have turned to Christ. Many of them have become great Christian leaders. In our day many individual Jews are turning to Christ. As we see a neighbor or a friend and think of what terrible misery may be ahead if he goes into the tribulation period without having accepted Christ as Saviour, let us be active and constant in our endeavor to win them to the Lord. Even though Israel is to be a nation born in a day, blessed indeed are those who see their Messiah now and turn to Him. Let us be active in bringing them the knowledge of the Messiah. Let us pray that God will lead many individual Jews today to accept Christ. Let us also praise Him for the plan that He has revealed that all Israel is to be in the future a recipient of His blessing and an instrument of His grace.
