

artist or a sculptor. Often they do not seem at all like they were. The undertaker usually has to have a photograph as a help in trying to make a lifelike life-like impression. That is not the person. The person is the spirit which ^{has} gone. I have all my life been anxious to relieve pain and been very sympathetic with every effort to ~~xxx~~ relieve the pain both of animals and of human beings. I have never felt, however, so far as I recall, that there was any great importance or value in the body that had ceased to be used by the spirit. I have never cared what will happen to it (mine) and it was almost accident that I went to the place where my father's body had been buried, for I felt no particular interest in going there ~~mf~~ or seeing it. Similarly I would far rather that my widow would have some money to keep her comfortable and warm and decently fed than that the money would be spent in paying attention to a body that I had ceased to use.
