

for the language of 300 years ago, but it does not have the impact today and it does not convey the knowledge today.

I heard a man reading the Scripture, last Sunday, and he read what to me would be, And you hath he quickened (which is the KJV), but he said, And you hath he made alive. Now I don't know whether that's the American Standard Version of 1910 or not, but we would never say today, And you hath He made alive. And if you say, And you has he made alive, it would sound crazy to us if you put it into our present English. You have to change it around to what has impact to people today. It had marvelous impact to people 300 and 50 years ago, but the Christian ~~EE~~ church is very very guilty before God that it did not 100 years ago ~~E~~ get leaders together to study and prepare a book that would have an impact for that time which would still have it today, such as the KJV had 200 years ago.

They want you to take 15 min. for coffee break