

The Russians, even though Stalin was caught unready, the Russians with that tremendous country and their almost innumerable supply of manpower, they had succeeded in devoping with American's help a very strong army, a very strong military force, and they were pushing the Germans back. The Allies had retaken most of France and the Russians had put the Germans out of Russia and their troops were within 30 mi. of Warsaw in Poland.

The General in charge of the forces that were underground in Poland received word from London that now is the time to make the great attack. This will put the Germans completely off balance and the Russian troops will come flooding in from the East and Poland will be freed. So Gen. Caciuz ? gave the word and in Aug. 1944 with the Russian Armies just 30 mi. away, and the Poles made the great uprising against the Germans. And the Russian army stayed 13 miles away and gave them no help whatever. They put their trust in the Russian forces. They had faith and their faith was completely misplaced.

The troops fought for 63 days, longer than it took the Germans to conquer Poland in the first place! in the course of 63 days everyone of these men who wanted a free Poland was eventually captured or killed. Then the Russian troops came across it with no Polish leaders to resist their efforts to dubeject the country to even worse tyranny that it suffered under Hitler. Faith was very real there. The faith of the British, the French, and the Americans, the faith of the Polish rebels in Russia. But the faith was absolutely misplaced. The Russians were determined on world conquest and found an easy way to work for it.

At the end of the war the Russians seized great sections of many countries in Europe, and most of these countries objected strenuously to the new borderlines that were drawn as the Russians reconstructed situations in Europe, and America said we will never agree to these artificial borderlines that the Russians have established!

But just a few years ago, we had a meeting at Helsinki. At that meeting were representatives of the different countries, and we said to the Russians if you will establish human rights over all these territories, we will agree that these borders you have drawn will be accepted and that these millions of Germans that you are holding in slavery that you just given them human rights and it will be alright, they can still be under your control. So we signed these Helsinki accords. And we put faith in the Russian promises about human rights.

Well Pres. Carter was greatly disappointed and discouraged when Stalin(?) went back on his promises breaking these human rights, and contin ed to put people in prison simply for believing in God, and for telling their children that there is a God. And we agreed to give back to the Russians very able spies in return for some of their disse beters and religious people that we'd heard a lot about that we wanted to give freedom to. So we put faith in their promises. Then they attackwd Afganistan, and ~~Carter~~ described his and utterly destroyed human rights there
