

Young. I was exposed to at that time. That was interesting. I got some things there I didn't get at church.

AAM: Then you were married before you went to Fuller?

Lady: No, I met my husband there at Fuller. I went to an extremely secular college. I majored in philosophy

AAM: But then you had work in education.

Lady: Well, I actually had a double major. I ~~graduated~~ graduated in education. Then I went to Fuller; met my husband, married him there. We came back east and had a very difficult time finding a church. Finally we spent several years at Lovin(?) --- the big Charismatic Group in Ithica.

AAM: I had never heard of it.

Lady: It's very much of local interest.

AAM: I see. Then you got into Eckelman's church.

Lady: We had known Eck for 15 years. I'm almost ashamed to admit it that we went there instead of going to Faith. Unfortunately because of the kind of growing up experiences I had had, I had learned very easily just to accept what I knew to be true and to shoulder other things aside. I did that at Fuller, and at the Presbyterian church. I did it at Lovin too. Which was not a wise mode of operating.

AAM: That's right.

Lady: But it did preserve my faith and I'm grateful to the Lord for His providence in all these issues.

AAM: So then you're husband got into electronics just sort of looking for a job?

Lady: Yes., by the time we discovered Faith

AAM: He had a full course at Fuller?

Lady: No, he didn't. He went one year and one additional semester. Neither of us got degrees from Fuller. Both of us went there sort of looking for what to do next. And we found each other.

AAM: That's very interesting. In history I've done a lot of reading but it's been disultory. I took a masters in history at Occidental--in American history. The first question on the exam was discuss the foreign relations of the U.S. from 1776 to 1825. I don't think I could write three words on the subject today. I wrote at great length for several hours on that, then. I was always most interested in the movements and people. I've read many books that have thrilled me, but that's what thrilled me most--seeing how people met situations.

Lady: What we've tried to do is to study American history this year. It's really what the men themselves had to say. I decided that was ~~the~~ something the children should be exposed to in learning to understanding the difference between primary and secondary sources of information. I find that they enjoy that very much. Bob Jones U. has published a book called America in Person. They have collected writings of numerous American history figures starting with Columbus. Then

A : They would have many of the testimonies to Christianity and the Bible.

Lady: So we've been using that.

AAM: That's good.

Lady: And I found an American Literature book that had been my
