

No. It must be dative of reference. The very verse before is. Why can't it be? When you recognize the possibilities you find in it the truth that the Christian world had to wait 19 centuries for an unbeliever to discover, but which was in the Scripture all the time.

I believe the conference is doing a good work. I believe it is very vital the material they are getting out. It is helpful. I wish it could be distributed far more widely than it is being done.

The problem with hermeneutics remains one which I believe we need to work over a great deal more and I believe God has tremendous blessing ~~to~~ to bring to us when we get busy on this one of the most vital things that any Christian can undertake.

Prayer: ~~xxxxxxx~~ We thank you for the Bible, that it is true and free from error. But O our God let us not only use it as a banner, let us use it as a sword. Let us use it as the place where we go to get the truths that are there instead of reading our human ideas into it, and simply looking for proof texts to support what we gotten from some man or some feeling of the age, instead of getting what God has for us. Help us to get the attitude toward the Word of God that you desire us to have. We ask in Jesus' Name. Amen.
