

him and I found a number of the uncommon books that he desired, one of which was by Emmanuel (sp?) Kant called Perpetual Peace or some such title. Another book he was very anxious to get was three-volume set by Hatch and Redpath, a concordance to the Septuagint. When I got to Oxford I was anxious also to get this for myself and I wanted to get one for the Faith Seminary library

When I got to Oxford I found that this set (which I believe costs around $50--perhaps a little less) was out of print. However, I was told that a considerable number of copies had been printed at one time and that it was the practice of the Oxford University Press, every now and then, to bind up a few copies and announce that it was again in print. So I left an order for three sets and completely forgot that I had done so. Later on, after I was back in ~~Philadelphia~~ Philadelphia (or was it Wilmington?) I heard that I saw an ad that this set was again in print and sent an order to the Oxford Press for three ~~copies~~ sets. I received a letter back saying that ~~they~~ they were sorry, that all copies had been sold, and the set was again out of print. A few days later a package arrived, sending me the three sets that I had ordered ~~when~~ when I was in England. I One set I put in the seminary library, one I sent to Wilbur and the other set I have here and have made use of it on many occasions.

Edward J. Carnell,

When the president of Fuller Seminary/wrote a book in which he said many nasty things about Fundamentalists I wrote a resolution/ ~~which~~ declaring how very unfortunate it was that an institution ~~which~~ should in so short a time as Fuller had been in existence/, turn so strongly against the principles on which it had been founded, and this was passed (don't they ~~adopt~~ adopt a resolution?) by the Synod of the Bible Presbyterian Church. This was while I was working on the Scofield Committee. That book was by Edward J. Carnell I remember now - was the name ~~author~~ of the ~~author~~ author. I think his is a sad story. While president of Fuller he ~~took~~ ~~this~~ wrote some books on the apologetics that I did not think particularly highly of. (bw?) However, he was regarded as a very fine scholar; he had been a member of their faculty and they had made him president, and while president he wrote these terrible things against Fundamentalists, such as Fundamentalists are not interested in building improvement, hospitals or social ~~improvement~~ they are too busy writing "Jesus saves" on the rocks, and other silly statements like ~~that~~ that. At any rate, (nc) they evidently made
