

- The Old Testament, An Introduction by Otto Eissfeldt (Harper and Row)
 A translation of a long accepted classic of higher criticism. Eissfeldt easily the most eminent liberal scholar in this field on the Continent, is a faithful adherent of the Graf-Wellhausen hypothesis. His Introduction will take a commanding position in liberal circles in the English-speaking world, doubtless displacing Pfeiffer and Driver altogether.
- Interpreting the Old Testament, by Walter Harrelson (Holt, Reinhart and Winston, 1964, 529 pp.) Prof of Bible at Vanderbilt Divinity School. A convenient synopsis of critical thought today.
- The Old Testament, Its Origins and Composition by Curt Kuhl (John Knox)
 (English translation)
- The Old Testament: Its Formation and Development by Arthur Weiser (Association Press). Both this and the book by Kuhl give good surveys of recent literature; both are written from the standpoint of modern negative criticism.
- The Message of Genesis, by Ralph H. Elliott (Broadman Press)
 Accepts the validity of the documentary hypothesis and the "double account of creation"
- The Problem of the Hexateuch and other Essays, by G. von Rad (McGraw-Hill)
- Christianity in the Computer Age, by Morton and James McLeman (Harper & Row)
- Robert Morgenthaler, Statistik des neutestamentlichen Wortschatzes
- A Critical Introduction to the Old Testament, G. W. Anderson (Duckworth)
 Gives the latest views in a brief compass
- A Light to the Nations, Norman K. Gottwald (Harper), 1959
- ✓ Old Testament in Modern Research, Herbert F. Hahn (Muhlenberg)
- The Books of the Old Testament, Robt. H. Pfeiffer (Harper)
- Understanding the Old Testament, Bernhard W. Anderson (Prentice & Hall)
- The Covenant, Colvin Alves (Cambridge) Accepts most of the older documentary views.
- The Hebrew Illiad, Robt. H. Pfeiffer and Wil Pollard (Harper).
 Popularizes the two-document theory of the books of Samuel
- 221.95
 SR 525 ✓ A Survey of the Old Testament, W. W. Sloan (Abingdon) A college textbook.
 Accepts the documentary hypothesis.
- He That Cometh, S. Mowinckel (Abingdon, N.Y.) A "Foremost O.T. scholar" from Oslo, Norway.