

element which must be destroyed is Christianity is to perish. And then they said, let us get at this task. You take the story of the Resurrection of Christ, I will take the story of the conversion of Paul and we will study the Book very thoroughly and publish the evidence to show that these events never happened and this will go a long way toward destroying Christianity. The two men separated and each of them spent many months studying in libraries and combing through the evidences in the Scripture, the different statements which they found about these events. As ^{one} ~~they~~ looked at the various accounts of the Resurrection of Christ and the other looked at the various accounts of the conversion of Paul and as they looked at it at first there seemed to be diversity and contradiction between them and he thought that here was evidence truly that they were false, but as he looked further, he found the evidence of contradiction was only superficial and lay upon the surface. It was exactly what one would expect if two or three different eye witnesses told a story of the same event. They each would see different aspects. When he got underneath he found a remarkable unity and agreement between them. Just what one would expect among various witnesses, if the story which they told were a true story though seen through different viewpoints and different aspects. The result was that when a good many months later the two men met again, each said, well, how is your book coming and the other said excellently, but Sir Gilbert West said, you know, he said, I have a confession to make to you, he said, as I have studied into the book, I have become more and more convinced that the book, as I have looked into the evidence that actually I was mistaken all the time, that Christ actually did rise from the dead, that this is true and he said, I have written my book, not to show that it is false but to show that it is true. And Lord Littleton said, that is strange because I have had the same experience. The more I studied into the account of the conversion of Paul and investigated, the more I became convinced that this actually was true and so I have written my account to prove that and the accounts may be read today. They are still well worth reading -- Sir Gilbert
