

is to trust to expert advice. In the case of the Bible I can look to the greatest expert of all, to Jesus Christ who has given me His word in these statements that He made while He was on this earth--not merely one statement, but the whole tenor of His constant attitude toward the books that the Jews of His day considered to be inspired.

The Christian church has taken the same attitude toward the New Testament as the Jews took toward the Old Testament, and I feel that it is fully justified in doing so, as a corollary to the attitude of Our Lord toward the Old Testament and His strong suggestion that a New Testament would be provided. Thus my faith in the dependability of the Bible rests upon my faith in the Expert, the one Expert who knows far more than any human expert could possible know.
