

then ~~was~~ when Elizabeth was Queen and when the plan was made to assassinate her and the efforts were made to make Mary, Queen of Scots, Queen of England and all this, there were Jesuits in disguise in England. And we have <sup>records</sup> ~~reference~~ of some of their accomplishments, ~~XXXX~~ a thrilling story what they went through disguised and accomplishing their ends and getting away safely. And they did much of that sort of thing. Well their reputation became established and there's no question that the Jesuits if they think it a desirable thing to do will assign one of their members to pretend to be a lawyer, a merchant, or anything else. But to just how great an extent that's done we have no way of telling of course because it's secret. But there have been at least some who were that way and in many countries there is an impression abroad that there are a great many. But the inner records of the order of course are quite secret now. I would doubt if there are many like that in this country. My guess would be that they have no need of that particular (4.) in this country. But if there's a place where their object would be advanced by it - you see that's one way they differ from other orders. The Franciscans have their they have to wear, the Dominicans that they ordinarily wear. The Jesuits don't have a set costume. They will ordinarily wear a clerical garb but they don't have to. The others are supposed to wear it all the time. Everything to them is subordinated to the purpose of their (4.5) Others have to put in so many hours a day reading in their prayerbook, chanting various hymns and so on. The Jesuits are supposed to do a lot of that sort of thing in their life but they don't have to do it on any particular day or any particular week - they are ready to give their entire effort to the objective at hand. Yes? (Student question) They are directed what they are to do
