

everything you could about the events associated with the name of (1.75)of France and that we discussed maybe seven minutes last time - it's a very interesting incident which doubtless you would all have been able to answer correctly. But in view of our time being short I thought just this one name would be better and what name would you put down then Mr. Anderson? (Henry of Navarre) That is quite satisfactor~~xyx~~y . That is his name before he became King - what I had in mind was his name after he became King but that's quite satisfactor~~y~~y. What did someone else say? (Henry IV ) Of course any other number but IV would be very definitely wrong. In fact I wish I had worded my question perhaps a little bit more precisely to show that I meant to give the number - because Henry IV and Henry III aren't a bit - the difference between Henry IV and Henry III is very, very important. Yet of course "Henry of Navarre" does identify him very definitely because that is what he was before he became King and no other Frenchman could be called Henry of Navarre. (Student question) Yes, we spoke about Henry II who was the son of Francis I who was very big~~terly~~terly ~~XXXX~~ anti-Protestant - reigned twelve years (3.) his mistress, we mentioned his wifeCatharine de Medici, and we mentioned his death in a tournament when he insisted on his Scotch Master of the Guard meeting him in single combat and the spear went through his eye and killed him.

But we did go into those details about Henry II. Then Henry III was the third son of Henry II to become King.
 And I mentioned about Henry III that when his brother, Charles IX was King of France, he was invited to become King of Poland - you remember that in order to become King of Poland he had to promise that he would not do anything against the Protestants in Poland because the Protestants were just about half of the Polish people by ~~that~~ time and included most of the important nobles and they did not want a king that would interfere with