

And we all make mistakes. And we all say things which carried on logically lead to nonsense. We all do. But, this view that <sup>all</sup> <sup>who</sup> people/ever have/ been ~~xxxx~~ saved or every/ will be saved in any other way than through the death of Christ is a view which no true Christian holds, no true Christian can hold, and to make it a definition of dispensationalism is simply to push the word out to be a word to describe people who aren't Christians at all. And no ~~people~~ Christian would <sup>he is a</sup> say ~~xxxx~~ dispensationalist. If that is what it ~~means~~ means, and if this is what it means, then every Christian must say that he is a dispensationalist. Well, what does the term dispensationalist mean? Well, I know people who take a certain statement, and they say, Here's a statement, and there are a thousand details in it, and we accept everyone of those thousand details exactly and that is a dispensational tribute, and we have .....11 $\frac{1}{2}$ ...., and then there are other people who will.....11 $\frac{1}{2}$ .... little details in this and say, Look, those are bad, and they are wrong, therefore, anybody is terrible that is a dispensationalist that accepts this .....11 $\frac{1}{2}$ ..... And then I have been with people who are leaders among those who are considered <sup>to</sup> ~~who~~ believe absolutely and implicitly in this whole system, and I have talked them, and heard them discussing, and one takes this point and raises the question, and one takes this point and discusses it, and one takes this point and raises a question, and I find that there are all kinds of views among those who are teachers and leaders, among those whom others would call dispensational.....12.... I don't like the word "dispensationalism" because I think it is a word that gives more heat than light. I think that the word probably can be used in such a sense that every Christian must be considered to be a dispensationalist, every true Christian, and I think the word can be used in such a sense that no Christian can be called a dispensationalist. Now, my guess is that the majority of people who speak of dispensationalism and by it mean a person who knows all the little details of what is going to happen in the return of Christ. That's what they call a dispensationalist. Now, it has nothing to do with the actual wording. But that's the way the word is used, more than .....12 $\frac{1}{2}$ ..... That's how the dispensationalists use it. One who knows all the little details about the return of the Lord. Well, now, there is nobody who
