age or importance as to make any vital change, and there is no important point of ~~for the~~ doctrine in which any manuscript discovered since 1611 could affect the people. I would say of the ~~changes~~ changes which the RSV has made over the KJ, a good many were made because the English language has changed and a good many were made because of the theological ideas of the translators. But a number were made because of new manuscripts.

Ans. The Dead Sea Scrolls give us sections from the O.T. from about the time of Christ, previous to that our oldest O.T. manuscripts in the Hebrew came from the tenth century AD so it carries our O.T. texts back but it doesn't differ in any vital point from the text that we have from the 10th century. Very. It shows us how very carefully it was preserved up to that time. As far as the H.C. is concerned I wouldn't say that ~~the~~ the Dead Sea Scrolls had any effect on them one way or the other. There are those ~~that~~ who have used the Dead Sea Scrolls as for a theory of ~~the~~ the origin of Christianity --that the teacher of Righteousness is a figure of the Christian idea of Jesus Christ, but practically all the important things about Christ ~~and~~ you find - find absolutely nothing in the Dead Sea Scrolls.
